MILWAUKEE – Following the revelation that St. Ben's Super Bowl party was going to center around a radio broadcast, Mayor Barrett called on several Milwaukee businesses to step up to make sure everyone could see the green and gold on Sunday.

St. Ben's Parish planned a viewing party for community members to watch the Packers play in the Super Bowl before they realized they were not wired for cable. In response, Time Warner Cable offered to purchase and install a T.V. converter box and antenna so that St. Ben's guests could see all of the action.

"I would like to thank Time Warner Cable for their community-minded, and Super Bowl, spirit," Mayor Barrett said. "Because of their support, guests of St. Ben's will be able to watch what will hopefully be a memorable game."

Additionally, Usinger's Famous Sausage and Klement's Sausage also donated gift boxes and sausages for St. Ben's party. "The outpouring of support these businesses have shown to a local parish is remarkable," Mayor Barrett said. "In these difficult and uncertain times, the Packers provide an opportunity to unwind and enjoy the spirit of competition. These donations will surely make this Sunday's Super Bowl a memorable experience for everyone who attends."

When Mayor Barrett travels to the White House on Sunday to watch the game with President Obama and First Lady Michelle Obama, he will be bringing a Usinger's Famous Sausage "Touchdown Box" and a Klement's Sausage Gourmet Gift Package.
